

XM Satellite Radio is a subscription-based service. What justification could there possibly be for restricting local information services, to those of us who make the investment in both the equipment and the monthly-charge?

The current administration is moving to control media - and it appears that the only way to stem the tide of attacks on our First Amendment rights, is to remove the Bush administration. Any changes made by the FCC to limit XM (and other's) - will be a clarion call to voters - that Bush no longer deserves our support.
